Beauty from Annuals

At Little Cost

BY F. F. ROCKWELL

SINGLE COSMOS
Cosmos, one of the most beautiful of annuals, for both cutting and garden-effects, is now available in new extra-early flowering varieties that make possible a long season of bloom from seed sown in the open

IN this year of grace, when economy is the national watchword, annuals will be more popular than ever, for the simple reason that with annuals one may secure a greater show for one's money, in a shorter time, than with any other type of flowers.

Even if it were not for this very decided advantage the annuals would be well worth growing. As a class they continue to flower for a much longer average season than the perennials, and they are unsurpassed for those mass color effects which always add so much to any garden. Even if one has an abundance of perennials there is always a chance to use annuals for "filling in" in the bare spots that are likely to occur, for edging, and for a generous supply of color both for cutting and for display in the very late fall garden.

There is, however, another reason why annuals have enjoyed for the last few years a revival that is likely to continue and increase for several seasons to come, whether or not we succeed in finding that corner just around which prosperity has been so successfully hiding. This reason is that during the last few years breeders and seed-growers have succeeded in developing an unusual number of new types and new varieties which are really worthwhile improvements over the older sorts among the annuals. Colors infinitely more charming, an advance in the season of bloom from the time of seed-sowing which means a saving not only in days but in some instances of weeks, more compact and uniform growth — all of these things have helped to make the newer annuals irresistible, and to enable them to regain their rightful place along with the perennials. One could mention, offhand, a dozen striking new types and varieties of annuals which almost any garden-lover will want to try — such, for instance, as the taller-growing larkspurs, in enchanting colors, like the new salmon-sheened Los Angeles, and Miss California; the new really blue pansy Lake of Thun; Cosmos Empress Pink, even earlier than the comparatively new "Early Flowering," blooming within sixty days from seed; snapdragons not only half-dwarf, but actually dwarf, so that they make ideal plants for the now universally popular rock garden; Ageratum Blue Ball, that makes a neat, compact little plant instead of crawling about like the kind you have grown in the past; the new Chinese Forget-me-not, bringing the universally loved Myosotis-blue to the annual garden; and the annual Anchusa Bluebird, giving the blue of the much-prized perennial to those who grow flowers from seed. There are also new types of dahlias, hollyhocks, and sweet Williams that will bloom the first season if the seed is sown early.

THERE are scores of other intriguing new annuals which await those who will take the trouble to look through the new catalogs for them — a wealth of material for whoever cares to use it. But in order to get the most in beauty and pleasure from these new annuals, one should not set about ordering them blindly and planlessly, as is too often done. Know first in a general way how you are going to use your flowers, where you are going to plant them and what effect you would like to get, and then you can select intelligently from among these wonderful new things.

There are several quite distinct purposes for which annuals may be employed
